Prototype 2

After my initial prototype, I chose to focus on different layouts for the scrolling pages and iterating them differently. I also realized I needed a sign in page, for privacy, along with the need for a settings/about section with different resources for people. Tammy also gave me a lot of good tips for how to solve some of my problems, along with how to layout my pages for scrolling capabilities. She also pointed out that the areas where you could type things in seemed to take up a lot of space and suggested they be made a little smaller in order to utilize the space more. She also gave insightful thoughts on what she thought the icons in the navigation meant, like she thought the heart meant favorites and she didn't know what the vent meant (a crude drawing of a vent at best). I like this layout more than my last idea, but, to me, it seems a little heavily stacked and almost hard to read, like if there was actual text there. I think what I will end up doing is integrating some of my ideas from my last prototype and add them in to this one.